

Citibank open on E. 23rd St.

Rei Perez, vice president of community relations for Citibank; Rob Walsh, commissioner of the NYC Department of Small Business Services; and Jennifer Brown, executive director of the Flatiron/23rd Street Partnership at the grand opening of Citibank's Financial Center on Tuesday

By Maciej Wroblewski

Citibank held a ribbon-cutting ceremony on Tuesday for its new financial center located at 115 East 23rd Street. The grand opening included presentation of a $15,000 grant to support the Children's Aid Society.

To commemorate the opening, Citibank presented a $15,000 check to the Children's Aid Society to help its mission to provide support and opportunities for children to become happy, healthy, and productive adults.

"We are proud to provide this grant to the Children's Aid Society," said Janet Nelson, financial center manager. "At Citibank, we are committed to helping make a difference in the communities where we work and live."

"Citibank is thrilled to open this new Financial Center in New York, home to our headquarters and one of our most important markets," said Maura Markus, president of Citibank North America. "We are proud to be part of this city and to provide innovative financial products and services to meet all our customers' needs."

The arrival of the new financial center was also welcomed by Jennifer Brown, executive director of the Flatiron/23rd Street Partnership. "This new branch will add to the great mix of retailers, restaurants, and small businesses in this dynamic neighborhood," she said.

The Citibank Financial Center will offer personal and business banking, investment accounts, mortgages, and insurance.

The location offers five ATMs and is open Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4 p.m. (6 p.m. on Thursday), and Saturday from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.