Jennifer Brown Appointed Executive Director Of Flatiron/23rd St. Partnership BID

The Flatiron/23rd Street Partnership, Manhattan's first new Business Improvement District (BID) in over four years, is pleased to announce the hiring of Jennifer A. Brown as Executive Director.

Brown brings to the Partnership an extensive background in community development and an in-depth understanding of city agencies, public policy, and urban issues. Before joining the BID, Brown served as a principal at A2B Consulting, LLC, providing management counseling to public sector and not-for-profit clients. She has also held positions at The Lower Manhattan Development Corporation – managing the organization's community development and government/community relations activities and working extensively with stakeholders affected by the September 11th attacks.

“The creation of this BID is a milestone in the revitalization of the Flatiron/23rd Street district and holds significant promise for the future of this community,” said Jennifer Brown, the Partnership's recently appointed Executive Director. “I look forward to working with the property owners, businesses and other stakeholders in this dynamic neighborhood.”

Brown has selected Timothy S. Cohen as the Partnership's Deputy Director. Cohen previously served as the Program Director of the 23rd Street Association, the organization that led the effort to create the BID.
